Great Enemy

TL Note: The phrase "I'll help you out" meaning you'll work to help someone out literally translates to "take my shirt off." So while it actually means "I'll help you out" taken extremely literally it sounds like "I'll strip for you." Naturally this phrase is used extremely often in gags to cause misunderstandings.

And she got all full of herself

And my first original work...
This work was full of firsts for me. It was my first time being professionally published, my first serialisation, my first volume release
Hello everyone. I'm He-be-

And then the day of sale
Serialised!
So I just come up with something random.
I see.
I was told that comments like "Hello, everyone," and "congrats to everyone getting serialised" are uninteresting and so I should avoid them.
Seriously?
I was told to think of something.
When the magazine picked up my serialisation, I had a chance to put a comment at the end.
How was Majyo to Houki to (...)? It is full of places where I was trying to find my way, but I hope you enjoyed it.
Well, then, I hope to see you again.
